Description

We are collecting views and download indicators for OpenAIRE, I would like to use them for us also.

We should have in the splash page of each item a banner with views and downloads ... something like Zenodo (see screenshot).

In addition to that, we should have two more graphs:

- total views by year;
- total downloads by year;

In the screenshot see the OpenAIRE graphs (they report monthly data).

I would say that the visibility is no longer an issue, data on downloads and views are made publicly available by OpenAIRE.

The point to be discussed are:

- do we have and maintain the data we provide to OpenAIRE by Matomo?
- apart from the aggregated data, do we have per item views and downloads? We do provide OpenAIRE with these data yet I don't know whether we keep it or not;
 - in case we keep it I'll considering adding two "proprietary" metrics reporting the per item download and views registered by the open portal instance

We have them but we also remove them regularly: what we upload to matomo is data extracted from the web server access logs, nothing else.

We should think about this and define a strategy to keep access data forever.

Is it possible to leverage matomo for having back the data?
